Stadium, Colchester
Stadium

This conference will be driven by practice and will offer an interactive day for learning and reflection.

We are delighted to be joined by the Department of Education (DfE) and Tim Fisher from the Kinship Care Charity who will be our keynote speakers.

- A representative of the Department of Education will address us about the journey that Kinship Care has been on, progress made and challenges ahead as well as the vital role Social Workers plays in supporting kinship families across our county.

This interactive and engaging workshop will support practitioners in identifying the potential for connecting and reunifying children and young people with their families, considering the preparatory work required to lay good foundations, trauma informed transitions and tailored interventions for children, young people and their families to promote reconnection and successful outcomes.

Call for Participants: Community in Harmony Workshops by OccuMind

A Creative Music Project for Young People Aged 16–19 Across Essex

We are reaching out to organisations, networks, and community partners across Essex who work with young people aged 16–19 to help us share an exciting opportunity: Community in Harmony.

Community in Harmony is a creative workshop programme that brings young people together through music, conversation, and shared experiences. Taking place in Basildon and Colchester between 24 July and 3 August, these workshops are designed to offer a welcoming and inclusive space where participants can connect with others, build confidence, and explore self-expression.

Through engaging activities such as icebreakers, music-based games, creative songwriting tasks, and discussions about the music and artists that inspire them, young people will have the chance to develop new skills, express themselves creatively, and meet peers from across Essex. No previous musical experience is needed, just an interest in taking part.

Refreshments will be provided during sessions, and travel cost subsidies will be available where needed to help make participation as accessible as possible.

We would greatly value your support in sharing this opportunity with young people in your networks who may benefit from a positive, creative, and community-focused experience.

For registration details, and workshop updates, please visit our website or scan the QR code.

What's Changing?

On 1 April 2025, new recycling regulations will come into effect as part of The Environment Act 2021 ensuring Simpler Recycling. It will require businesses across England to ensure recycling and waste material is collected by a licensed waste collection service and separated into:

RECYCLABLE

What Happens Now?

Before 1 April 2025, businesses need to make sure they are compliant with the new Simpler Recycling regulations, including having an appropriate waste contract with a licenced waste carrier. The waste materials are:

- ➡ Recycling: Paper & Card • Plastics

About For Baby's Sake

For Baby's Sake is a modular programme for expectant co-parents where domestic abuse is a concern. It takes a whole-family, trauma-informed approach, starting in pregnancy and continuing up until the baby is two.

The long-term therapeutic relationship is the core of the programme, addressing the root causes of harm, and giving parents the tools they need to make positive changes for their baby. Each parent works separately with their own Therapeutic Practitioner, and sessions are delivered within a hybrid online and face-to-face model.

Therapeutic Practitioners work closely with each other and with multi-agency partners to safeguard the baby and manage risk.

Criteria

- Expectant co-parents - we work with both those who experience harms, and those who use harmful behaviour
- Currently based in the East of England
- A commitment to co-parent where it is safe to do so (no expectation to be in or stay in a relationship)
- A history of domestic abuse in the relationship
- Consent to receive long-term, therapeutic support
- A willingness to seek our support

Dealing with “auditors”

Identifying “auditors”

Many key figures in the far right are or have previously been so-called “auditors.” These agitators, who often previously called themselves “citizen journalists,” seek to stir up anger and outrage by “investigating” the issues the far right often focuses on, and publishing clickbait videos. They often seek to film at places like hotels that house people seeking asylum, large-scale asylum accommodation sites and migrant support organisations, as well as at protests.

Is it illegal for “auditors” to film?

It is not generally illegal to photograph, video or otherwise record locations or individuals in public, even if it is without the individual's consent. It is not even illegal to take photographs of children in a public setting without their consent.

However, private locations require the permission of the owner, registered user or those who have a legal claim to the title of the location used. That permission can be withdrawn.

Recording someone with the intent to harass, intimidate, or stalk them can be illegal. Similarly, recording someone in a private setting where they have a reasonable expectation of privacy may be considered intrusive and potentially illegal.

The difficulty arises as the claim of reasonable expectations of privacy may not apply. For example, places such as hotels, shared office buildings and conference or event venues will have both public areas (e.g. the foyer/ reception and grounds) and private areas (e.g. guest rooms, areas marked private, staffrooms).

“Auditors” are careful to ensure they do not cross the line into criminality. They have been coached in understanding the relevant laws. They may sometimes overstep the line and commit offences under the Public Order Act, but this is generally rare.

While “auditing” may not cross the line into criminality, you should report all instances to senior management at your organisation. Building up a picture of ongoing auditing over a period of time, including any concerning or harassing behaviour, can be helpful if the targeting escalates in future.

What to do when “auditors” are filming

It is important that all personnel remain polite and professional if responding to a situation where someone is recording premises and/or staff. When engaging, remember that your first words will often dictate the tone of the interaction. It is vital that you never volunteer information, and never attempt to change their mind by engaging with them.

A common tactic used by auditors is to force the conversation towards “straw man” arguments.

Straw man arguments simplify and twist what someone is saying. For example, if a teacher says that many accidents involving children happen when they are playing, somebody might then in bad faith claim that “the schoolteacher wants to ban everything fun.”

To avoid being drawn into this, stick to a scripted reply and always be polite. Although some may seem to be simply asking polite questions, it is wise to remember that everything you say can be re-edited to have a meaning that suits their political ends. Every question will be designed to mislead or trick you into feeding their agenda.

While it may seem a good approach, saying “I don’t know” or “Can’t comment” will fuel the citizen journalist, as these statements can be easily manipulated to show either incompetence or naivety. It is easier to stick to a scripted statement such as “I am not in a position to answer your questions. Please look at our website or speak to our press officer.” If your organisation does not have these, you can simply say, “I am not in a position to answer your questions, thank you.”

Remember that the goal is often to generate controversial content. The best defence is to make their interactions with you forgettable. Even the most innocent of statements can be twisted, and any hint of annoyance, aggression or impoliteness will be used to discredit not only you but your organisation as well.

If you are not comfortable engaging with the person filming, and it would not further endanger others, consider simply walking away or returning to the last place of safety. These individuals can be intimidating, and ultimately your safety takes precedence.

If the questioning becomes threatening and aggressive, return to your last safe location, and call for help.

Conflict management

When interacting with suspected auditors, we recommend a CALM approach – Chat, Assess, Limit, Monitor.

Chat in a friendly manner – be polite but not forthcoming with information

Assess for hostile intent – be mindful of their agenda

Limit interactions beyond what’s essential – do you have to interact?

Monitor risk of escalation – be situationally aware

Do you want to have your say in how your neighbourhood is policed?

Are you willing to be a critical friend of the police to help them improve?

Are you passionate about voicing the needs and concerns of your community?

If the answer is yes, your local Independent Advisory Group (IAG) may be the platform for you.

Be part of a two-way conversation with your local police to discuss significant incidents, shape and influence policy and procedure, give feedback on neighbourhood policing matters.

Each young person will receive tailored training and DWP-funded support from a DWP appointed Delivery Partner helping them prepare for, engage with, and progress in their job.

WHY SHOULD YOUR BUSINESS TAKE PART?

Taking part lets you grow your business and strengthen your workforce while making a real difference to someone's life. In addition to the financial benefits above, you will also have access to untapped talent in your local community and the opportunity to trial a candidate for six months, with the option to retain them afterwards.

In return, you will need to:

- Offer a genuine paid job you would otherwise recruit for, with day-to-day support for the young person.
- Confirm your organisation meets reasonable requirements to ensure roles are safe, fair and good quality (usually via a simple declaration).
- Work with your Delivery Partner to support a young person, providing a named point of contact and notifying them of any changes affecting the young person's role.

WHAT TO EXPECT

Young people on the scheme can bring fresh perspectives, diversity and loyalty to your organisation. They may also face barriers to employment, which is why Reed in Partnership will provide them with personalised support specific to the needs of the young person and your business. Young people typically want to gain confidence through secure stable employment, feel valued and develop skills for a long-term career. Although some of these young people face barriers, securing a job can help increase motivation and confidence, give them solid experience in work and ultimately transform their lives.

The young person is most likely to thrive with a supportive employer offering clear structure, on-the-job training, flexible working where possible, and access to a workplace buddy or mentor.
